

MEDITATIONS

Written by Burton Beerman

The softness of a new baby's skin gently dipped in warmed water like the light begging at the end of the tunnel
she cried
but she cried for joy for inside there is no pain inside there is only the joy of a wake of jassing until the wail of the dawn

Now comfort enough.