

Thoughts

Written by Burton Beerman

She stood tall with her lizard-like skin unafraid of the scorching sun yet I felt sorry for her they way one might feel sorry for a bug before stepping on it.

Nightfall sailed like a lanky insurance salesman unafraid of the barking dogs but I only could pine for her as they lunch on the dead ants.